

Comments from relatives involved in the abortion decision

Regretful father; In 1976 I encouraged my stepdaughter to get an abortion. She was 17 and I was not a believer. We took her to the clinic and had the procedure done. We stopped on the way home to eat. It was no big deal and, in fact, a celebration for we parents that the crisis was over. Unfortunately my step daughter was never able to have another child. Years later I became a Christian and recognized the value of unborn human life. I grieve to this day of the murder of that unborn child and the damage to my stepdaughter who never had the chance to be a mother. All fathers and grandfathers of unborn children will never forget their responsibility in not speaking up protecting that unborn child and it's mother at some time in the future. Men were created by God to be the protector of their family born or unborn.
